

The Return Orders Placed with a Third-party (Marketplace) Seller help page explains the process for returning products purchased from third-party sellers on Amazon.in. It provides information about identifying marketplace sellers, scheduling returns, contacting sellers, and understanding the protection offered through the Amazon A-to-Z Guarantee. Customers can access the content in their preferred language by selecting the desired language from the country flag menu available in their profile settings. To check the status of a return or refund request, customers can open Your Returns, select the relevant order, and choose View Return/Refund Status.

Customers can identify the seller of a product by visiting the product details page, where the seller's information is displayed. The product details page also indicates whether the item is shipped directly by the seller or fulfilled and delivered by Amazon. Products that are fulfilled and delivered by Amazon display the appropriate Amazon Fulfilled logo below the product details. Customers requiring additional information regarding shipping methods can refer to the Amazon Fulfilled Orders and Seller Fulfilled Orders help pages.

Before initiating a return for a seller-fulfilled order, customers must contact the seller within the applicable return window specified in the Amazon.in Returns Policy. For marketplace orders fulfilled and delivered directly by third-party sellers, returned products are sent back to the respective seller rather than to Amazon. Since each marketplace seller may maintain different return policies, customers should review the seller's return policy available on the seller's profile page before purchasing a product. To return a seller-fulfilled order, customers must first submit a return request to the seller. Once the seller approves the return request, the customer should coordinate directly with the seller to arrange the return pickup.

To return a seller-fulfilled order, customers should navigate to Your Orders, select the product they wish to return or replace, and choose Contact Seller. This action opens the Seller Messaging Assistant, where customers can select the appropriate support option and initiate a conversation with the seller regarding their return or replacement request.

The Amazon A-to-Z Guarantee is a customer protection program designed to safeguard purchases made from third-party sellers who sell and ship products independently while providing their own customer service. Customers are eligible to file an A-to-Z Guarantee claim if they have purchased physical goods that were both sold and shipped by a third-party seller through the Amazon.in marketplace. Before submitting a claim, customers must first contact the seller through their Amazon account and wait at least 48 hours for the seller's response. Additional eligibility requirements are available on the A-to-Z Guarantee help page.

If the seller does not provide sufficient return instructions or fails to respond to the customer's inquiry within 48 hours, the customer may submit an A-to-Z Guarantee claim to request Amazon's assistance with the return process. Detailed instructions for submitting an A-to-Z Guarantee claim are available on the Request an A-to-Z Guarantee Refund help page. Customers who need to return products that are fulfilled and delivered by Amazon should instead follow the instructions provided on the How to Schedule a Return help page.